* These two experiments had identical design except a 100 ms observation period of the BPs in the 1000°C and 1200°C. In the previous experiments we used a 50 ms observation period for the first 3.5 minutes, a 100 ms period for the last 1.5 minutes. Concerning the thermal environment, in general, the first 100 ms BP image only has a small amount of noise, indicating the image is full of thermal noise. After the 100 ms observation period, the BP image will be blurred by the thermal environment temperature in motion and vibration. The full periods of observation in this experiment (10 minutes at 1000°C and 10 minutes at 1200°C) are used for the procedure of the thermal temperature in general.
