Relatives Obligation To Report Child Endangerment

Relatives Obligation To Report Child Endangerment:

The Sovereignty of Children in Law Farhad Malekian, Kerstin Nordlöf, 2012-01-17 The system of the United Nations as well as many international and regional bodies imposes various duties on states that consequently have obligations towards the rights of their individuals This is particularly significant in the case of children who are not only considered one of the most valuable subjects of international regulations but are also an integral part of the legislation of domestic laws Despite the fact that laws concerning the rights of children are well settled in the international sphere and are recognized under the jus cogens norms national laws about children or national laws having an effect on children are still not completely adequate Many legislative and cultural practices expose the fact that children are not recognized as the holders of rights National legal authorities should not in accordance with the existing international legislations plead provisions of their own laws or deficiencies of those laws in response to a request against them for alleged violations of children s rights that have occurred under their jurisdiction In fact the absence of appropriate legislation within national legal systems and the reluctance of legal authorities to seriously take children s rights into consideration have been two of the key reasons for the contraventions of children s rights in national or international conflicts Strange as it may seem when we do not respect the rights of others it might be considered a civil violation or a crime But when the rights of children are violated it has on many occasions been dismissed as custom or argued that they gave their express consent For example in the nineties when a child of 11 was raped in Sweden the judgment concluded that there was an implicit consent Similarly when a child of seven was raped by an Iranian priest in a Mosque it was judged as the victim receiving spiritual enlightenment By analogy with the rules which exist to provide legal social and economic aid to the victims of national or international crimes it may be possible to suggest that there is an established legal duty for all states to provide access to resources which can under reasonable criteria protect children from the improper conducts of individuals organisations and the administration of justice It is in principle true that literally millions of people believe that children are their property or that a child has no rights of his or her own and thus the conduct of parents guardians representatives of organisations and the administration of justice relating to children are permitted as a matter of law or nature This book examines many different areas within the law which deal with the specific rights of children such as the philosophy of law civil law social law tax law criminal law procedural law international law human rights law and the humanitarian law of armed conflict The intention is to show that there are many rules provisions norms and principles within various areas of the law that relate to the rights of children The extent of these rights implies the existence of certain regions of law which have to be acknowledged and respected by national authorities However the acknowledgement of rights is also a matter of intention and may be implied or expressed by the practice of authorities The question of the child constituting a self ruling subject of justice and its legal ability to create an independent individual legal personality for the protection of its rights but not necessarily for the exercise of those rights are the central issues of this
