resulting from the advocated multifactorial approach to Particle Movement are Particle Movement can be described at a previously unknown level of detail all determinants ever proposed to govern the alternation can be integrated into a single hypothesis explaining the alternation constructions can be compared to each other with respect to their degree of prototypicality and similarity it is possible to actually predict with a high degree of accuracy which of the two word orders native speakers will subconsciously choose in the natural production of speech and text thereby passing the most rigorous test conceivable finally competing hypotheses can be compared in terms of their predictive power Apart from these methodological points the study also addresses the more theoretical and linguistic question of how to explain such results It is argued that theories of language production that rest on the notion of processing effort are contrary to some contemporary analysts not ideally suited to explain such phenomena and that interactive activation models of language production allow for a more elegant interpretation and implementation of the results
