CLASSIFICATION OF COOKING METHOD

Dry-heat Methods, With or Without Fat

- ◊ refers to any cooking technique where the heat is transferred to the food item without using extra moisture. This method typically involves high temperatures—300°F or hotter.
- ◊ dry-heat cooking methods like stir-frying, pan-frying, deep-frying, and sautéing rely on fats and oil to act as the cooking medium.
- ◊ in dry-heat methods that don't use fat—like grilling and roasting—food is cooked either by direct or indirect application of radiant heat, no liquid is used, and any fat that is added during the cooking process is intended to add flavor and not to act as a cooking medium. The end result is a highly flavored exterior and moist interior.

TYPES OF DRY HEAT METHOD

Frying - means cooking your food in fat, one of the quickest ways to cook food, with temperatures typically reaching between 175- 225°C.

DIFFERENT KINDS OF FRYING:

- ◊ Deep-frying - where the food is completely immersed in hot oil.
- ◊ Stir-frying - where you fry the food very quickly on a high heat in an oiled pan.
- ◊ Pan-frying - where food is cooked in a frying pan with oil
- ◊ Sauteing - where the food is browned on one side and then the other with a small quantity of fat or oil.

Roasting - roasting is basically a high heat form of baking, where your food gets drier and browner on the outside by initial exposure to a temperature of over 500°F. This prevents most of the moisture being cooked out of the food. The temperature is then lowered to between 425 and 450°F to cook through the meat or vegetables.

Baking - this involves applying a dry convection heat to your food in an enclosed environment. The dry heat involved in the baking process makes the outside of the food go brown, and keeps the moisture locked in. Baking is regularly used for cooking pastries, bread and desserts.

Grilling - this is a fast, dry and very hot way of cooking, where the food is placed under an intense radiant heat. You can use various sources of heat for grilling: wood burning, coals, gas flame, or electric heating. Before grilling, food can be marinated or seasoned.

distinctively narrow focus primarily on receptive propositional knowledge and in part through a tendency to assume rather than to investigate the perfectly general applicability of the various definitions of knowledge it develops Against this background many questions and issues concerning the heterogeneity of knowledge remain under explored This volume identifies the study of the unity and heterogeneity of knowledge as a distinct subtopic of epistemology It asks what forms of knowledge there are what is distinctive about each how they relate to one another and what kind or kinds of unity we can discern unity amongst them Forms of Knowledge brings together philosophers working across a broad range of the philosophical literature not only in contemporary theory of knowledge but also in the history of philosophy the epistemology of understanding philosophy of mind action theory ethics art and aesthetics and philosophy of psychiatry to consider how best to theorize the unity and heterogeneity of knowledge By foregrounding this underexplored set of issues it offers a new perspective on some of the most central of our ordinary epistemological categories Cooking Class Deanna F.
