Delivered in the University Arthur Thomas Quiller-Couch, 2018-08-06 On the Art of Writing Lectures delivered in the University Large Print By Arthur Thomas Quiller Couch In all the long quarrel set between philosophy and poetry I know of nothing finer as of nothing more pathetically hopeless than Plato's return upon himself in his last dialogue The Laws There are who find that dialogue left unrevised insufferably dull as no doubt it is without form and garrulous But I think they will read it with a new tolerance may be even with a touch of feeling if upon second thoughts they recognise in its twisting and turnings its prolixities and repetitions the scruples of an old man who knowing that his time in this world is short would not go out of it pretending to know more than he does and even in matters concerning which he was once very sure has come to divine that after all as Renan says La Verit consiste dans les nuances Certainly the mind's dark cottage battered and decayed does in that last dialogue admit some wonderful flashes From Heaven descended to the low roofed house Of Socrates or rather to that noble banquet hall deserted which aforetime had entertained Socrates Suffer me Mr Vice Chancellor and Gentlemen before reaching my text to remind you of the characteristically beautiful setting The place is Crete and the three interlocutors Cleinias a Cretan Megillus a Lacedaemonian and an Athenian stranger have joined company on a pilgrimage to the cave and shrine of Zeus from whom Minos first lawgiver of the island had reputedly derived not only his parentage but much parental instruction Now the day being hot even scorching and the road from Cnossus to the Sacred Cave a long one our three pilgrims who have foregathered as elderly men take it at their leisure and propose to beguile it with talk upon Minos and his laws Yes and on the way promises the Cretan we shall come to cypress groves exceedingly tall and fair and to green meadows where we may repose ourselves and converse Good assents the Athenian Ay very good indeed and better still when we arrive at them Let us push on We are delighted to publish this classic book as part of our extensive Classic Library collection Many of the books in our collection have been out of print for decades and therefore have not been accessible to the general public The aim of our publishing program is to facilitate rapid access to this vast reservoir of literature and our view is that this is a significant literary work which deserves to be brought back into print after many decades The contents of the vast majority of titles in the Classic Library have been scanned from the original works To ensure a high quality product each title has been meticulously hand curated by our staff Our philosophy has been guided by a desire to provide the reader with a book that is as close as possible to ownership of the original work We hope that you will enjoy this wonderful classic work and that for you it becomes an enriching experience Studies in Literature Arthur
