fifteen main ideas or concepts that will help teachers to become better at what they do to help learners reach their potential. Each concept is a common sense approach that is backed by research and provides an understanding of what a teacher should know and be able to do as an effective professional in their classroom. Ultimately it is the teacher behaviors that have an impact on the student behaviors and each chapter provides sound suggestions and tips to set the teaching and learning relationship up for success. At the end of the chapters there are Reflection Scenarios to assist the reader in thinking through possible issues and assist the reader in applying the concept to situations in their own practice. There are also guiding questions to stimulate personal reflection and may be helpful if using the book for a book study for professional learning community dialog and discussion. Standards-based Activities with Scoring Rubrics: Performance-based projects, 2002

Computing and Philosophy in Asia Soraj Hongladarom, 2009-03-26. This volume is a collection of selected papers presented at the Second Asia Pacific Computing and Philosophy Conference which was held in Bangkok, Thailand, in January 2005. The conference was organized by the Center for Ethics of Science and Technology, Chulalongkorn University, on behalf of the International Association of Computing and Philosophy (www.ia-cap.org). Computing has had a long relationship with philosophy, starting from the problem of how symbols being manipulated in computing bear a relation to the outside world to those of artificial intelligence, robotics, computer simulation, and so on. Moreover, as computer technologies have become thoroughly pervasive in today's environment, there are also issues concerning social and ethical impacts brought about by them. The papers in the volume represent a wide variety of concerns and various dimensions within which computing and philosophy are related. Furthermore, it also represents some of the first attempts to highlight cultural dimensions of computing and philosophy, which became prominent when the conference was held for the first time within the milieu of an Asian culture. The First Asia Pacific Computing and Philosophy was held in Canberra, Australia. Hence, many of the papers in the volume address this added dimension. Apart from the usual problems of how computers and human lives are interconnected, the papers here also discuss how computers are related to human lives as lived in a specific culture. Thus, the book breaks a new ground and should be of interest to a wide range of scholars and students who are interested not only on computing and philosophy generally construed but also on this exciting new dimension of how the cultures of Asia, the West, and others bear upon the traditional issues in computing and philosophy and on how this dimension raises some new concerns and agenda. Among the topics discussed in this volume are political online forums in Saudi Arabia, e-democracy and structural transformation of public sphere, the Buddhist informational person, a glance into the lives of computerized generation in Thailand, technology and journalism in the market, local approaches and global potential of information ethics, computer-enhanced good life, computer teaching ethics, and many others.
