These theoretical issues remain unresolved when faced by contemporary structural and developmental psychologists, neuroscientists, and policy makers. Further, progress in understanding language and thought requires a more holistic approach to the study of language and thought, one that recognizes the importance of the social and cultural context in which language and thought are used. The development of a more holistic approach to the study of language and thought is a challenge that requires the collaboration of psychologists, linguists, and other social scientists.

Major and family members for the brother-in-law, Edward Anthony, are invited to attend, and take the place of the brother-in-law himself. The Polynesian Trust's Chief Communications Officer, Professor Cliff and Barbara Thompson, direct the communications strategy about the Polynesian Trust's mission. Examples of the communications strategy include:

These findings have important implications for the design of the training program. The results suggest that the training program should be designed to address the specific needs of the participants, such as the need for information on the legal and ethical aspects of the profession, and the need for information on the current state of the profession. The results also suggest that the training program should be designed to be interactive and engaging, and that it should provide opportunities for participants to practice their skills and to receive feedback from their peers and from the trainers.
