Consider the Grand Canyon, measuring 277 miles long, 18 miles wide and more than 2 miles deep. It is considered one of the Seven Natural Wonders of the World and attracts more than 2 million visitors per year. The geological record was created by the waters of the Colorado River through the processes of weathering and erosion. Fluvioergols is the process by which moving water breaks down soil, rock and minerals, and creates the processes by which the flowing water transports soil particles from one place and deposits it elsewhere. The two processes often occur in succession.

Weathering and erosion are very slow processes. Geologists believe the Colorado River has been flowing through the Grand Canyon for at least 5.7 million years, and it has been gradually shaping that unique view since then. The River went off the coast and its tributaries have carved out of the rock of the Colorado Plateau, creating the sight we see here today with us.

Such success, perhaps even too frequent among commentators, and featured editors personalized reports, made significant their efforts and perhaps, among thousands of media, not only the personal and professional success, but also the social and political success of the country and its citizens.
