

1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to define the problem clearly. This involves identifying the symptoms, the scope of the problem, and the impact it is having on the organization.

2. The second step is to gather information about the problem. This involves talking to people who are involved in the problem, looking at data, and researching the problem.

3. The third step is to analyze the information. This involves identifying the causes of the problem, the factors that are contributing to the problem, and the potential solutions.

4. The fourth step is to develop a plan of action. This involves identifying the steps that need to be taken to solve the problem, the resources that will be needed, and the timeline for the project.

5. The fifth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the plan into action, monitoring progress, and making adjustments as needed.

6. The sixth step is to evaluate the results. This involves assessing the effectiveness of the solution, identifying any remaining issues, and determining what lessons can be learned from the experience.

7. The seventh step is to communicate the results. This involves sharing the findings of the investigation with the relevant stakeholders and providing recommendations for future action.

8. The eighth step is to follow up. This involves checking back on the problem to ensure that the solution is still working and that no new issues have arisen.

9. The ninth step is to document the process. This involves creating a record of the investigation and the solution, which can be used as a reference for future problems.

10. The tenth step is to review the process. This involves reflecting on the entire process and identifying areas for improvement.
