Marshall's correspondence is a richly documented and lively chronicle. The correspondence was important to him, and under the same collection of letters, with its handwritten annotations and printed sheets, survives numerous printed letters exchanged with English officials. The volumes (nos. 1-4) cover the period in the United States that began with travel to Washington, D.C., and ended with his departure for England, and include the important but previously unpublished correspondence between Marshall and the British government, including, notably, proposals for the proposed American colonization of the Cape Verde Islands, and proposals for the purchase of land for the settlement of American soldiers in the Cape Verde Islands. The printed letters are mostly from the period 1800-1801, and are mostly from the period 1800-1801, and are mostly from the period 1800-1801.

Household expenditures across the border generally are the same. But important differences in the way that expenditures are reported to the general ledger can be seen in the way that the two countries use their general ledger. In the United States, the general ledger is the income tax return. In the United Kingdom, the general ledger is the annual budget. The two countries use different general ledger systems, and this can lead to differences in the way that the two countries report their general ledger.

Multi-state management capabilities is another very important technology aspect that needs to be addressed. Unlike the traditional 30 or 40 line of code, the multi-state design can be applied to numerous scenarios across the general ledger, including cost allocation to the general ledger, transferring data and information to the state or province or the company's database, and the using such data to generate other information and reports for internal or external use. Such processing and report about general ledger refers the multi-state issue. The capabilities need the following functions and features:
