

Chapter 35 Nervous SystemObserving Nervous Responses*Introduction

The nervous system runs to all parts of the body. Like a computer network, the nervous system carries impulses between the brain, the sensory organs, the muscles, and the glands.

A reflex action is a little different. It begins with a stimulated nerve, but it does not rely on the brain to produce the response. Your body performs many types of reflex actions. Sneezing is a reflex action in response to irritation of your nose. When you touch a hot object, you immediately pull your hand away. You might be aware of a reflex action occurring, but you are unable to stop or control it.

How do these reflex actions occur? When your hand touches a hot object, for example, heat receptors in the skin send an impulse to the muscles of the arm to contract. The impulse travels along the sensory neurons, to the spinal cord, across a synapse, and stimulates a motor neuron. The impulse leaves the spinal cord, passes through a nerve, and back to the arm muscles, causing them to contract and pull your hand away. This pathway is called a reflex arc. Because a reflex arc involves only the spinal cord and not the brain, a reflex action occurs in a matter of a fraction of a second. You are not able to control a reflex—it happens automatically.

In a nonreflex response, an impulse must travel to the brain. The brain interprets the stimulus and produces a response. This process takes longer than the time required for a reflex arc. A person's reaction time can be measured by how quickly he or she can perceive a stimulus and then react to it. Driving a car and playing tennis are examples of activities in which reaction time is very important.

In this investigation, you will observe reflex actions and measure your reaction time.

Problem

Can you control reflex actions? How can you measure reaction time?

Pre-Lab Discussion

Read the entire investigation. Then, work with a partner to answer the following questions.

1. What will you be comparing in this investigation?

2. Predict what will happen to your knee when it is tapped.

Fitzgibbon, Jamie Ward, 2014-08-27 Everyday we vicariously experience a range of states that we observe in other people we may feel embarrassed when witnessing another making a social faux pas or we may feel sadness when we see a loved one upset In some cases this process appears to be implicit For instance observing pain in others may activate pain related neural processes but without generating an overt feeling of pain In other cases people report a more literal conscious sharing of affective or somatic states and this has sometimes been described as representing an extreme form of empathy. By contrast there appear to be some people who are limited in their ability to vicariously experience the states of others. This may be the case in several psychiatric neurodevelopmental and personality disorders where deficits in interpersonal understanding are observed such as schizophrenia, autism and psychopathy. In recent decades neuroscientists have paid significant attention to the understanding of the social brain and the way in which neural processes govern our understanding of other people. In this Research Topic we wish to contribute towards this understanding and ask for the submission of manuscripts focusing broadly on the neural underpinnings of vicarious experience. This may include theoretical discussion, case studies and empirical investigation using behavioural techniques, electrophysiology, brain stimulation and neuroimaging in both healthy and clinical populations. Of specific interest will be the neural correlates of individual differences in traits such as empathy, how we distinguish between ourselves and other people and the sensorimotor resonant mechanisms that may allow us to put ourselves in another's shoes.
