ORGANIZATION OF LIVING THINGS

SCIENCE IN FOCUS – BIODIVERSITY, EARLY

How Do You Understand How Are Living Things Organized?

Living things are organized into different levels of organization. The levels of organization are: cell, tissue, organ, organ system, organism, population, community, ecosystem, and biosphere. Each level of organization has a specific function.

Cells are the basic units of life. They are made of a nucleus and cytoplasm. Tissues are groups of cells that work together to perform a specific function. Organs are made of tissues that work together to perform a specific function. Organ systems are made of organs that work together to perform a specific function. Organisms are made of organ systems that work together to perform a specific function. Populations are made of organisms of the same species that live in the same area. Communities are made of populations of different species that live in the same area. Ecosystems are made of communities and their physical environment. Biospheres are made of ecosystems.

Scientists study the organization of living things to understand how they work. They use microscopes to look at cells and tissues. They use dissection to look at organs and organ systems. They use field studies to look at populations, communities, ecosystems, and biospheres. They use models to represent the organization of living things.
