Review of the U.S. Climate Change Science Program's Synthesis and Assessment Product 5.2, "Best Practice Approaches for Characterizing, Communicating, and Incorporating Scientific Uncertainty in Climate Decision Making" National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Atmospheric Sciences and Climate, Committee to Review the U.S. Climate Change Science Program's Synthesis and Assessment Product 5.2, 2007-03-23 This report reviews the U S Climate Change Science Program's new draft assessment product on characterizing and communicating uncertainty information for climate change decision making one of 21 climate change assessment products that the program is developing to meet the requirements of the 1990 Global Change Research Act Although the draft assessment is effective in discussing methods of characterizing uncertainty it falls short in several ways It is written for researchers involved in assessment efforts and will likely be of use to them but does not address other key audiences particularly policymakers decision makers and members of the media and general public In addition it does not assess the full range of best practice approaches for characterizing incorporating and communicating uncertainty These weaknesses were due in part to a change in the prospectus after the process had begun to include new target

audiences and a different scope of work It will take a substantial revision of the current draft or production of a companion document both requiring additional authors to address these issues
