TABLE 1. Estimated and observed values of the parameters of the model[illegible]

Figure 10 reports the results of the regression model. The coefficient on the variable Age is positive and significant at the 1% level, indicating that older individuals are more likely to be employed in the informal sector. The coefficient on the variable Gender is negative and significant at the 1% level, indicating that females are less likely to be employed in the informal sector. The coefficient on the variable Education is negative and significant at the 1% level, indicating that individuals with higher education are less likely to be employed in the informal sector. The coefficient on the variable Experience is positive and significant at the 1% level, indicating that individuals with more work experience are more likely to be employed in the informal sector. The coefficient on the variable Health is negative and significant at the 1% level, indicating that individuals with better health are less likely to be employed in the informal sector. The coefficient on the variable Income is positive and significant at the 1% level, indicating that individuals with higher income are more likely to be employed in the informal sector. The coefficient on the variable Unemployment is positive and significant at the 1% level, indicating that individuals who are unemployed are more likely to be employed in the informal sector. The coefficient on the variable Constant is negative and significant at the 1% level, indicating that the intercept is negative. The adjusted R-squared value is 0.15, indicating that the model explains 15% of the variance in the dependent variable.
