

Abstract Background: The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of self-reported mental health problems in a community sample of young adults. Methods: A cross-sectional survey of 1,000 young adults (18–24 years) was conducted. The survey included a validated measure of self-reported mental health problems. Results: The prevalence of self-reported mental health problems was 12.5%. The most common self-reported mental health problems were anxiety disorders (5.5%), depression (4.5%), and substance use disorders (3.5%). Conclusions: The prevalence of self-reported mental health problems in this community sample of young adults is higher than the prevalence of self-reported mental health problems in the general population. This finding suggests that young adults may be at a higher risk of developing mental health problems than the general population.

Partnership
Partnership Plan
Why did I create this partnership with?	I am creating this partnership with a community organization to provide support and resources for students who are struggling in school. The goal of this partnership is to provide students with the resources they need to succeed in school and to provide them with the support they need to stay in school.
What are the goals of this partnership with the community organization?	The goal of this partnership is to provide students with the resources they need to succeed in school and to provide them with the support they need to stay in school. The goal is to provide students with the resources they need to succeed in school and to provide them with the support they need to stay in school.
How will I measure the success of the partnership with the community organization?	The success of the partnership will be measured by the number of students who are able to stay in school and the number of students who are able to succeed in school. The success will be measured by the number of students who are able to stay in school and the number of students who are able to succeed in school.
