The Political Economy of Coal Michael Jakob,Jan C. Steckel,2022-02-01 This volume provides an overview of the political economy of coal in diverse country contexts Coal is the largest source of greenhouse gas emissions globally accounting for about 40 percent of energy related CO2 emissions Continued construction of coal fired power plants could make the climate targets of the Paris Agreement infeasible to achieve In spite of sharply declining costs for renewable energy sources many countries still heavily rely on coal to meet their energy demand The predominance of coal can only be adequately understood in light of the political factors that determine energy policy formulation To this end this edited volume assembles a wide variety of case studies exploring the political economy of coal for across the globe These includes industrial and developing nations coal importers and exporters as well as countries that are either substantial coal users are just beginning to ramp up their capacities or have already initiated a coal phase out. Importantly all case studies are structured along a unifying framework that focuses on the central actors driving energy policy formulation their main objectives as well as the context that determines to what extent they can influence policy making. This large set of comparable studies will permit drawing conclusions regarding key similarities as well as differences driving coal use in different countries. This book will be of great interest to students and scholars of energy climate change resource management and sustainable development. It will also appeal to practitioners and policymakers involved in sustainable development. ECMLG 2018 14th European Conference on Management, Leadership and Governance Dr. Ing. Benny M.E. de Waal, Prof. dr. Pascal Ravesteijn, 2018-10-18

The Golden Age of Theoretical Ecology: 1923-1940 F.M. Scudo, J.R. Ziegler, 2013-03-08 This is the part of any book where the authors usually discuss why they wrote it. We hope however that the text will justify itself. In fact any well trained ecologist will immediately grasp the significance of these seminal works. We have therefore tried to keep our interpretive comments to a minimum. Students of modern theoretical ecology will want to contrast the papers in this collection with their modern derivatives. We believe that those who do so will be surprised if not amazed by the ecological sophistication and intellectual power of the earlier works They will stand as a challenge to those who study them and we hope provide a standard for the quality of their work By presenting this collection of works most of them not easily available and or for the first time in English we hope to help them attain the high level of recognition they deserve We are also enabling readers not sufficiently familiar with Italian to acquire enough of a background to properly follow the works in French not presented here by including Volterra's Variazioni e fluttuazioni del numero d'individui in specie animali conviventi 1927 still available in the original edition

Colour and Form

Perception: Straddling the Boundary Galina V. Paramei, Cees van Leeuwen, 2016-05-31 Starting from psychophysics over the last 50 years most progress in unravelling the mechanisms of color vision has been made through the study of single cell responses mainly in LGN and striate cortex A similar development in the study of form perception may seem to be underway centred on the study of temporal cortex However because of the combinatorial characteristics of form perception we are also observing the opposite tendency from single cell activity to population coding and from static receptive field structures to system dynamics and integration and ultimately a synthetic form of psychophysics of color and form perception From single cells to system integration it is this development the present Research Topic wishes to highlight and promote How does this development affect our views on the various attributes of perception In particular we are interested in to what extent evolving knowledge in the field of color perception is relevant within a developing integrative framework of form perception The goal of this Research Topic is to bring together experimental research encompassing both color and form perception For this volume we planned a broad scope of topics on color in complex scenes color and form as well as dynamic aspects of form perception We expect that the Research Topic will be attractive to the community of researchers whose work straddles the boundary between the two visual perception fields as well as to the wider community interested in integrative systems neuroscience
