thereof It is divided into five sections pain prejudice acceptance hope and joy In the first section pain which explores different kinds of pains humanity is living with ranging from physical abuse racism love rejection and death In the first poem Fire it shows how we often feel the need to fill the emptiness of others materialistically even though what they need is not tangible Some things we lose but we can never get them back and we have to live with the loss forever It is not just our personal losses which hurt us but also of those we love It is so easy to be angry after experiencing so much pain that we begin to look at others no longer with love but with preconceived judgements In the second sections various prejudices are revealed which have become our norms We live in a misogynistic racist body shaming religious and selfish world In the poems When men used to be gods and Bag of dicks it talks about the injustice women have had to endure at the hands of the men they trust and love Being treated as part of the furniture and never having to be respected and appreciated or at the least being left alone The blind faith of religious people is constantly exploited by greedy and selfish people who have made other human beings their gods The last poem in this section talks about the recourse of women to the oldest profession in the history to better themselves Despite the pain and the prejudice we live in acceptance is necessary in order to move forward Acceptance of your true self your pain rejection and love leads to the realisation of completeness despite not having all we think we deserve In this third section one the poems The blackness of my blackness which exudes a paradigm shift in the perception of blackness The pain of being a black person is superseded with the celebration of all that is good and true The pain in love is accepted in the poems Broken and We are written in the stars Both self love and an embrace of existing together without the need for perfection can bring Hope It is this hope that makes us to love again want to grow and shine and become all that we can be In this fourth and fifth sections a new hope is seen dreams begin to show up again Nothing becomes impossible and there even a glimmer of Joy in places no one ever pictured Despite the existence of our pain and prejudices when we accept everything and have a change of mindset we can eventually see the light the way out of our demise
