Adapted Mind Jerome H. Barkow, Leda Cosmides, John Tooby, 1992 Although researchers have long been aware that the species typical architecture of the human mind is the product of our evolutionary history it has only been in the last three decades that advances in such fields as evolutionary biology cognitive psychology and paleoanthropology have made the fact of our evolution illuminating Converging findings from a variety of disciplines are leading to the emergence of a fundamentally new view of the human mind and with it a new framework for the behavioral and social sciences First with the advent of the cognitive revolution human nature can finally be defined precisely as the set of universal species typical information processing programs that operate beneath the surface of expressed cultural variability Second this collection of cognitive programs evolved in the Pleistocene to solve the adaptive problems regularly faced by our hunter gatherer ancestors problems such as mate selection language acquisition co operation and sexual infidelity Consequently the traditional view of the mind as a general purpose computer tabula rasa or passive recipient of culture is being replaced by the view that the mind resembles an intricate network of functionally specialized computers each of which imposes contentful structure on human mental organization and culture The Adapted Mind explores this new approach evolutionary psychology and its implications for a new view of culture

Inclusive Humanism Christoph Antweiler, 2012-09-11 The diversity of interconnected cultures on a bounded planet requires more shared orientations The humanities and politics have to face fundamental questions What does a humanism look like that does not move too rapidly to universalize the views and historical experiences of the European or American world How can we conceive of globality as a new entity without playing unity and diversity off against one another Does a world culture that is becoming ever closely related in fact need common values or only rules of human exchange How can we succeed at civilizing an ever present ethnocentrism How do we keep the terms culture and humanity from being misused as weapons in identity wars Any realistic cosmopolitanism must proceed from an understanding of humankind as one entity without requiring us to re design cultures to fit on with some sort of global template Answers can be gained by deploying shared characteristics of humans as well as pan cultural commonalities This book offers an anthropologically informed foundation for addressing pertinent questions of intercultural exchange
