Children, Schools, And Inequality Doris R Entwisle, 2018-03-05 Educational sociologists have paid relatively little attention to children in middle childhood ages 6 to 12 whereas developmental psychologists have emphasized factors internal to the child much more than the social contexts in explaining children's development. Children, Schools, and Inequality redresses that imbalance. It examines elementary school outcomes e.g. test scores, grades, retention rates in light of the socioeconomic variation in schools and neighborhoods, the organizational patterns across elementary schools, and the ways in which family structure intersects with children's school performance. Adding data from the Baltimore Beginning School Study to information culled from the fields of sociology, child development, and education, this book suggests why the gap between the school achievement of poor children and those who are better off has been so difficult to close. Doris Entwistle, Karl Alexander, and Linda Olson show why the first grade transition, how children negotiate entry into full-time schooling, is a crucial period. They also show that events over that time have repercussions that echo throughout children's entire school careers. Currently, the only study of this life transition to cover a comprehensive sample and to suggest straightforward remedies for urban schools. Children, Schools, and Inequality can inform educators, practitioners, and policymakers as well as researchers in the sociology of education and child development. Family-School Links Alan Booth, Judith F. Dunn, 2013-10-31 Based on the presentations and discussions from a national symposium on family-school links held at the Pennsylvania State University, this volume brings together psychologists, sociologists, educators, and policymakers studying the bidirectional effects between schools and families. This topic—the links between families and schools and how these affect children's educational achievement—encompasses a host of questions, each of key social and educational significance. How far does parental involvement in schools affect children's experiences and achievement at school? What explains the great differences between schools, families, and communities in the extent of such involvement? Are these differences a matter of school practices or do they reflect much broader social and cultural divisions?

What is the nature of the impact schools have on children and their families How can family school partnerships be fostered in a way that helps children The chapter authors consider these questions and related issues present different perspectives highlight various aspects of the issues and suggest widely differing answers This volume s goal is to provide the reader with current information on what is known about family school community links and to provoke new ways of thinking about these links and their implications for children s education and well being Course of Study in Reading for Grades 1 to 6 ...
