It is argued that the use of a questionnaire of 20 items is appropriate for a preliminary study. The questionnaire is designed to identify differences in perceptions and self-reporting between students in different years of study. However, the questionnaire is not a validated instrument and the results of the study may be affected by the use of a questionnaire of 20 items.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the subjects. The walking program significantly improved the subjects' physical health, as measured by the 6-minute walk test, and their psychological health, as measured by the Beck Depression Inventory and the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory. The walking program also significantly improved the subjects' quality of life, as measured by the SF-36. The walking program was well tolerated and had no adverse effects. The results of this study suggest that a supervised walking program can be an effective intervention for improving the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically and resistance training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of older adults. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically and resistance training program. The control group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically and resistance training program. The results showed that the intervention group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and health-related quality of life than the control group at the end of the 12-week program. The findings suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically and resistance training program can improve physical fitness and health-related quality of life in older adults.
