IS PREPARED WITH THE ACCOUNTANT Information Accounting for Users: Management and Financial Performance Reports

Management Information

Accountant's responsibility is a relatively unchanging one: to inform. The responsibilities are expanded by the accountant who knows the business as well as the accounting. In addition to the usual financial information, the accountant should furnish management with management information. This information is to help with the decision to be made after the facts have been laid out in the financial statements and with the program for preparation, after that program, of management's financial statements. For the accountant, management, however, preparation of the financial statements, disseminating the data, and, finally, the presentation of the data to the management are not primary tasks. It is primary tasks that management should have in mind when the accountant is asked to prepare the financial statements. The accountant should be able to help with the preparation of the financial statements, but the primary task is to help with the preparation of the financial statements. The accountant should be able to help with the preparation of the financial statements, but the primary task is to help with the preparation of the financial statements.
