Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, supervised, low-impact, aquatic exercise program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were randomly assigned to either an exercise group or a control group. The exercise group performed a 12-week, supervised, low-impact, aquatic exercise program. The control group did not exercise. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The exercise group showed significant improvements in physical fitness and health-related quality of life compared to the control group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, supervised, low-impact, aquatic exercise program can improve the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women.
