

A vintage photograph with a teal-to-yellow gradient overlay. It depicts three people on a sandy beach. On the left, a woman in a light-colored dress and a wide-brimmed straw hat with a feathered band is smiling and looking upwards. In the center, a man in a patterned shirt and shorts is also smiling. On the right, another man in dark swim trunks is walking towards them. A large, light-colored beach umbrella is open over the group. The entire image is framed by a thin red border.

Once Upon A Time In Melbourne

Ed Vosatka

Once Upon A Time In Melbourne:

Melbourne's Logging Era Ed Vosatka, 2012 Melbourne was a quiet coastal town of 157 people on Florida's Indian River lagoon. Farming, ranching, fishing, and related trades supported the local economy. Melbourne entered the industrial age in 1912 when the Union Cypress Company began manufacturing lumber from the private cypress and pine holdings of George W. Hopkins at Deer Park. This timber had a 1911 market value of over 2 million. Good employment and a local source of lumber brought development, and the company-owned mill town of Hopkins was eventually annexed by Melbourne. The company provided Melbourne's first electricity and outpatient hospital. The Union Cypress Railway provided the first direct route to Florida's interior across the impenetrable St. Johns River and marsh, saving over 100 miles and countless hours of back-road travel via Enterprise, which was 80 miles to the north. It opened the vast St. Johns prairie lands for settlement and carried much of the regional commerce.

Family Experiments Shelley Richardson, 2016-11-30 Family Experiments explores the forms and undertakings of family that prevailed among British professionals who migrated to Australia and New Zealand in the late nineteenth century. Their attempts to establish and define family in Australasian suburban environments reveal how the Victorian theory of separate spheres could take a variety of forms in the new world setting. The attitudes and assumptions that shaped these family experiments may be placed on a continuum that extends from John Ruskin's concept of evangelical motherhood to John Stuart Mill's rational secularism. Central to their thinking was a belief in the power of education to produce civilised and humane individuals who, as useful citizens, would individually and in concert nurture a better society. Such ideas pushed them to the forefront of colonial liberalism. The pursuit of higher education for their daughters merged with, and in some respects influenced, first-wave colonial feminism. They became the first generation of colonial middle-class parents to grapple not only with the problem of shaping careers for their sons but also, and more frustratingly, with what graduate daughters might do next.

Loading the Silence: Australian Sound Art in the Post-Digital Age Linda Ioanna Kouvaras, 2016-05-13 The experimentalist phenomenon of noise as constituting art in much twentieth-century music paradoxically reached its zenith in Cage's silent piece 4'33". But much post-1970s musical endeavour with an experimentalist telos, collectively known as sound art, has displayed a postmodern need to load modernism's degree zero. After contextualizing experimentalism from its inception in the early twentieth century, Dr. Linda Kouvaras's Loading the Silence: Australian Sound Art in the Post-Digital Age explores the ways in which selected sound art works demonstrate creatively how sound is embedded within local, national, gendered, and historical environments. Taking Australian music as its primary but not sole focus, the book not only covers discussions of technological advancement but also engages with aesthetic standpoints through numerous interviews, theoretical developments, analysis, and cultural milieux for a contemporary Australian and wider postmodern context. Developing new methodologies for synergies between musicology and cultural studies, the book uncovers a new post-postmodern aesthetic trajectory which Kouvaras locates as developing over the past two decades.
