Running Group Visits in Your Practice Edward B. Noffsinger, 2009-07-21 A Fateful Meeting A year and a half ago I was sitting at a conference listening to Ed Noffsinger speak and suddenly had the most profound Aha moment of my professional career. Here was someone presenting a practical and tested solution to some of the most challenging problems currently plaguing the US healthcare system: problems such as poor access to primary and specialty care, the uncontrollable and rising costs of healthcare, our nation's relatively poor quality outcomes, and finally the sense of frustration, disempowerment, loneliness, and disenfranchisement that patients and their families too often experience. Dr. Noffsinger's solution seemed deceptively simple: shared medical appointments (SMAs) that afford the highest quality healthcare to be delivered in the highest quality care experience: a group setting. Experience collected over a decade and involving more than 100,000 patient visits throughout the United States, Canada, and parts of Europe has demonstrated that SMAs, when used in primary care as well as in the medical and surgical subspecialties, lead to increased access to care, enhanced quality of care, and improved patient satisfaction. For physicians, the efficiency gains and team support from their participation in SMAs translate into much needed relief and improved career satisfaction.

Naran's Bach Flower Remedies, The Way We Think Gilles Fauconnier, Mark Turner, 2008-08-06 In its first two decades, much of cognitive science focused on such mental functions as memory, learning, symbolic thought, and language.

acquisition the functions in which the human mind most closely resembles a computer But humans are more than computers and the cutting edge research in cognitive science is increasingly focused on the more mysterious creative aspects of the mind The Way We Think is a landmark synthesis that exemplifies this new direction The theory of conceptual blending is already widely known in laboratories throughout the world this book is its definitive statement Gilles Fauconnier and Mark Turner argue that all learning and all thinking consist of blends of metaphors based on simple bodily experiences These blends are then themselves blended together into an increasingly rich structure that makes up our mental functioning in modern society A child s entire development consists of learning and navigating these blends The Way We Think shows how this blending operates how it is affected by and gives rise to language identity and concept of category and the rules by which we use blends to understand ideas that are new to us The result is a bold exciting and accessible new view of how the mind works
