Practical Guide To Health Promotion:

Promoting Health: A Practical Guide - E-Book Angela Scriven, 2010-05-04 Promoting Health is a seminal text that has been used in the training and education of health promoters over the last 25 years and has shaped health promotion practice in the UK. This 6th edition has undergone significant revision by a new author Angela Scriven, a leading academic widely published in the health promotion field, bringing it up to date with current practice. The text provides an accessible practical guide for all those involved in health promotion. Concerned with the what, why, who, and how of health promotion, it is invaluable to students of the discipline. Fully updated to meet the needs of today's public health practitioners. Case studies and exercises enable application of ideas. Provides practice and guidance on report writing, running meetings, and working with the media and influencing policy. Discusses working with groups and networks as well as individual clients. User-friendly interactive style. New contemporary format.

Promoting Health Linda Ewles, Ina Simnett, 2003 A best seller since 1985, this 5th edition has been fully revised and updated. It takes account of developments in the new millennium such as revised national strategies for health in the UK, the modernisation of the National Health Service, and the advent of national programmes to tackle the root causes of inequalities in health. It features recent innovations such as the emergence of a multi-disciplinary public health workforce, new research on the comparative effectiveness of different approaches to health promotion, and the impact of information and communication technology. Other new features include a glossary of jargon commonly used in public health and health promotion, and website addresses for further information.

Promoting Health: A Practical Guide - E-Book Angela Scriven, 2017-06-30 Promoting Health: A Practical Guide continues to offer health promotion workers with an essential guide to day-to-day planning and service delivery in a variety of different areas of practice. Describes the international and national strategies and movements that have emerged to reduce inequalities in health. Examines the concept of need and provides tools to assist in the identification of health promotion needs. Contains almost 50 exercises and 20 Case Studies to engage readers and reinforce learning. Describes the knowledge and skills required to draw on evidence, undertake research, and use various techniques to inform and prioritise health promotion practice. Shows how to ensure that health promotion work contributes to local and national strategies. Looks at the concept of value for money via learning ways of thinking based in health economics. Shows how to develop key skills that include information management, report writing, time management, project management, and change management. Looks at the effectiveness of good communication skills and emphasises the importance of establishing high-quality professional relationships. Provides practical guidance on the preparation of communication tools which range from leaflets, posters, and display boards to the use of radio and television. Describes changes to the structure and organisation of public health within the UK, including the latest national standards for work in health promotion and public health. Outlines new research on the comparative effectiveness of different approaches.

It will inspire anyone involved with health care to find practical ways of promoting positive change.

A Guide To Practical Health Promotion
 Gottwald, Mary, Goodman-Brown, Jane, 2012-08-01 This book should become a key textbook of choice for a wide range of health care professionals and students. It encourages autonomous learning and helps develop critical analytical skills. Each chapter follows a logical progression using key objectives which relate to a range of activities and up to date evidenced based sources of information. The range of depth and breadth of material is contemporary and as such should meet the academic, managerial and clinical background of the reader. Helen Matthews, Senior Lecturer in Health and Community Care, University of West London, UK. This text represents a useful, well pitched contribution. The book is densely packed but skilfully written to feel comfortable for the reader, challenging in places but never to the extent to discourage engagement. Jane Thomas, Acting Head of College of Human and Health Sciences, Swansea University, UK. Do you have difficulties deciding which health promotion activities facilitate behavioural change? This accessible book focuses on the practical activity of health promotion and shows students and practitioners how to actually apply health promotion in practice. The book uses case scenarios to explore how health promotion activities can empower individuals to make decisions that change their health related behaviour. This book explores the role of health promotion and explores a number of practical approaches such as developing clients' self awareness and skills working with groups and communities and social marketing and the mass media. The book includes Learning outcomes, think points and implications for practice giving readers guidance on engaging with
