- “Insurance rates in rural America remain years in a row.”
- There is a serious problem facing the American people. Insurance rates in rural America are years in a row. The problem is not just the fact that rates are high, but that they are rising. The problem is not just the fact that rates are high, but that they are rising. The problem is not just the fact that rates are high, but that they are rising.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of self-reported depression between men and women who had been exposed to violence by intimate partners. Data from the National Longitudinal Study of Women's Health are used to examine the prevalence of self-reported depression among women who have experienced physical or sexual violence by their current or former partner. Results indicate that women who have experienced violence by their current or former partner are more likely to report symptoms of depression than women who have not experienced such violence.
