

14.001: Moore's Ecological Strategy

Within the large metapopulation, I found local subpopulations of adults mostly living in the same place as I did. When I searched about thirty acres this year, four out of five places I searched were empty. The few adults that were living in the places I searched were mostly living in the same place as I did. The few adults that were living in the same place as I did were mostly living in the same place as I did. The few adults that were living in the same place as I did were mostly living in the same place as I did.

Furthermore, the same subpopulations that stayed the same as I did, had a small number of adults living in the same place as I did. The few adults that were living in the same place as I did were mostly living in the same place as I did. The few adults that were living in the same place as I did were mostly living in the same place as I did. The few adults that were living in the same place as I did were mostly living in the same place as I did. The few adults that were living in the same place as I did were mostly living in the same place as I did.

Thus, the same subpopulations that stayed the same as I did, had a small number of adults living in the same place as I did. The few adults that were living in the same place as I did were mostly living in the same place as I did. The few adults that were living in the same place as I did were mostly living in the same place as I did. The few adults that were living in the same place as I did were mostly living in the same place as I did. The few adults that were living in the same place as I did were mostly living in the same place as I did.
