Abstract The purpose of this study was to investigate the effects of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological characteristics of young women. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The participants were 15 young women (mean age 20.5 years, range 18-22 years) who were divided into two groups: a control group (n=7) and an experimental group (n=8). The experimental group underwent a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The training program included aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not undergo any training. The physical characteristics measured were body mass index (BMI), body fat percentage, and heart rate (HR). The psychological characteristics measured were anxiety, depression, and self-esteem. The results showed that the experimental group had significantly lower BMI, body fat percentage, and HR than the control group at the end of the 12-week training program. Additionally, the experimental group had significantly lower anxiety and depression levels and higher self-esteem levels than the control group at the end of the 12-week training program. The findings of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively improve the physical and psychological characteristics of young women.
