Prehistoric Pathfinders Pioneers Of English Archaeology:

Prehistoric Pathfinders Barry M. Marsden, 2014 This work draws together a series of pen portraits of some 40 individuals who helped shape the foundations of English prehistoric and later study mainly during the 18th and 19th centuries They represented a diverse cross section of contemporary society including army officers churchmen country squires and gentry suicides bankrupts a probable illegitimate Royal farmer tradesmen plus a scion of the nobility and a superintendent of a lunatic asylum The list is of necessity subjective as it seemed necessary wherever possible to have an image of each individual As well as portraits short biographies of each person are embellished with appropriate illustrations including digs artifacts archaeological sites and some of their more interesting tombs together with other images connected with their activities The work will hopefully stand as an instructive and entertaining who's who of these early activists together with an assessment of their importance in the study of the origins of English archaeology Pioneers of Prehistory Barry M.
