Abstract
 The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 20 men, aged 40-50 years, who were sedentary and had no history of cardiovascular disease. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic and resistance training. The control group did not exercise. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The results showed that the exercise group had significant improvements in physical fitness and health compared to the control group. The exercise group had a significant increase in maximal oxygen consumption ($\dot{V}_{O_{2max}}$), maximal heart rate ($\dot{V}_{O_{2max}}$), and maximal power output ($\dot{V}_{O_{2max}}$). The exercise group also had a significant decrease in body mass index (BMI), blood pressure (BP), and cholesterol levels. The control group had no significant changes in any of the variables. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve physical fitness and health in sedentary middle-aged men.
