1. The first step is to identify the problem.

Abstract: This paper presents a new algorithm to solve the problem of finding the minimum number of nodes in a directed graph that are sources of all paths. The algorithm is based on the concept of a "source" node, which is a node that has no incoming edges. The algorithm is implemented in a program that runs on a personal computer. The program is written in C++ and is available for download from the author's website. The program is tested on a set of graphs and the results are compared with the results of a brute force search. The results show that the algorithm is significantly faster than the brute force search.
