These 22,000 birds were released into the wild, and the birds were monitored for 10 years. The results of the study showed that the birds were able to adapt to the new environment and that the release was successful.

There are many thousands of children in Chinese orphanages and those who stay, unfortunately, are "labeled" as orphans. This unfortunate circumstance is further compounded because, in order to obtain family status, they must be "legitimized" by the government. This legitimization is accomplished by "adoption" by a Chinese family. In the past, this was done by the government, but now it is done by the family. The government is responsible for finding the child, but the family is responsible for the child's upbringing. The government is responsible for the child's education, but the family is responsible for the child's moral and spiritual development. The government is responsible for the child's health, but the family is responsible for the child's emotional well-being. The government is responsible for the child's socialization, but the family is responsible for the child's individuality. The government is responsible for the child's future, but the family is responsible for the child's present. The government is responsible for the child's life, but the family is responsible for the child's soul.

However, it is important to always control the depth of the breath. When a child inhales or exhales too fast and too shallowly, the lungs cannot absorb the oxygen that is present in the air. Always encourage the child to breathe slowly and to exhale for about half the time that it takes to inhale. This will help the child to breathe more deeply and to use the lungs more efficiently.
