Passages From Behind These Doors A Family Memoir:

Passages from Behind These Doors: a Family Memoir Catherine Sevenau, 2014-09-30 This kaleidoscope of frank funny and tender tales are about sin and prayer about good intentions and unattended sorrows and about finding our way back home Growing up in California in the 1950s and 60s Catherine Clemens Sevenau was raised primarily by an older sister survived five years living with an unhinged erratic mother and spent summers working at her father's five and dime in San Francisco's Haight Ashbury This era and sense of place provide the colorful background to a soul searching and riveting account of her early family life Through it all she tells her story with humor and grace BEHIND THESE DOORS is a portrait of a woman's journey to find her place in the family and to understand her troubled mother The compelling stories create a tapestry of love loss hurt and laughter With clarity and perspective Sevenau embraces the events of her early years and comes to appreciate what transpired were gifts in disguise that what occurred happened for her not to her Transforming a bewildering and fractured childhood into a life well lived she has found her way back home Catherine Sevenau is an irreverent humorist and an astute storyteller These twenty passages from BEHIND THESE DOORS are a poignant and captivating taste of her first book

Observation of America and My Ancestral Past: An Epistolary Autobiography

Richard P. Sinay, 2024-07-23 An Epistolary Autobiography is a day to day writing about events in a person's life my observations of America during a twenty five thousand mile trip around the country My trip started in Indio California took along the South to the Southeast then to the Northeast then back along a Northern route to the Midwest the Northwest and then full circle back home The trip was intended to do three things allow me to check off some of my bucket list items meet with my first cousins to present information about the origin of our grandparents and explore those places I always wanted to see as a teacher of American Literature and history While traveling through the country I made some observations about America that may differ from other points of view but these observations are what I saw on my trip I share those with the reader as part of the interest of the book I also wanted to share my perceptions of the great writers of American Literature and what they stood for I was also checking off my bucket list and sharing my experiences doing those things like visiting the boyhood home of Mark Twain one of my favorite writers I taught these writers for thirty seven years and wanted to see the ground they walked on Literature was an important part of my life seeing the hallowed grounds where some of our literary giants stood was also a goal for this adventure I wanted to see Old Faithful go off drive in Yellowstone National Park see Mount Rushmore and play golf at some exclusive golf courses here in America
