Unified Lagrangian Formulation for Fluid and Solid Mechanics, Fluid-Structure Interaction and Coupled Thermal Problems Using the PFEM Alessandro Franci, 2016-10-04 This book treats the derivation and implementation of a unified particle finite element formulation for the solution of fluid and solid mechanics Fluid Structure Interaction FSI and coupled thermal problems FSI problems are involved in many engineering branches from aeronautics to civil and biomedical engineering The numerical method proposed in this book has been designed to deal with a large part of these In particular it is capable of simulating accurately free surface fluids interacting with structures that may undergo large displacements suffer from thermo plastic deformations and even melt The method accuracy has been successfully verified in several numerical examples The thesis also contains the application of the proposed numerical strategy for the simulation of a real industrial problem This thesis defended at the Universitat Politècnica de Catalunya in 2015 was selected ex aequo as the best PhD thesis in numerical methods in Spain for the year 2015 by the Spanish Society of Numerical Methods in Engineering SEMNI

Air Force Research Resumés , Shear Waves in Marine Sediments J.M Hovem, Michael D. Richardson, Robert D. Stoll, 2012-12-06 Shear waves and closely related interface waves Rayleigh Stoneley and Scholte play an important role in many areas of engineering geophysics and underwater acoustics In some cases interest is focused on large amplitude waves of low frequency such as those associated with earthquakes and nuclear explosions in other cases low amplitude waves which have often travelled great distances through the sediment are of interest Both low and high frequency shear and interface waves are often used for seafloor probing and sediment characterization As a result of the wide spectrum of different interests different disciplines have developed lines of research and a literature particularly suited to their own problems For example water column acousticians view the seafloor sediment as the lower boundary of their domain and are interested in shear and interface waves in the near bottom sediments mainly from the standpoint of how they influence absorption and reflection at this boundary On the other hand geophysicists seeking deep oil deposits are interested in the maximum penetration into the sediments and the tell tale characteristics of the seismic waves that have encountered potential oil or gas bearing strata In another area geotechnical engineers use shear and
