

KEY MODULATION CHART

This chart shows chords that you can use as "transition" chords when modulating from one key to another. The most common modulations are either 1/2 step or a whole step up from the original key. For example, modulating from the key of "C" up to either "C#" (D $\flat$) or "D". When modulating up a whole step – for example, from "C" to "D", a common "transition" chord would be the chord a half step between the two – in this case "C#" (D $\flat$)". So the modulation would be: C $\rightarrow$ C# (D $\flat$) $\rightarrow$ D. However, we're not limited to just the chord a half step between the original key and the new key. For example, in the chart below, you'll see 3 options available when modulating from "C" to "D". You can either use "C#" (D $\flat$)", A" or even "Ami". There are "theoretical" reasons why these "transition" chords work, but I opted to avoid mentioning them only because it could cause confusion to anyone who doesn't know music theory.

As mentioned earlier, the most common modulations are either 1/2 step or a whole step up from one key to another. However, I've included modulations that go up two whole steps to higher keys (example: "C" to "E"), although they're not as common.

The chart is pretty self-explanatory. The first column shows the original key. The second column shows the "target" key (the key you're modulating to), and the third column shows the "transition" chord or chords you can use to move into the new key.

The keys I selected for this chart are C – D – E – F – G – A – B. When dealing with other keys, like "B $\flat$ ", "E $\flat$ ", etc., you could just find the chords for "B" and "E" on this chart, then just mentally transpose everything down a half step.
