Altmann,1997 This collection of papers and abstracts stems from the third meeting in the series of Sperlonga workshops on Cognitive Models of Speech Processing It presents current research on the structure and organization of the mental lexicon and on the processes that access that lexicon The volume starts with discussion of issues in acquisition and consideration of questions such as What is the relationship between vocabulary growth and the acquisition of syntax and How does prosodic information concerning the melodies and rhythms of the language influence the processes of lexical and syntactic acquisition From acquisition the papers move on to consider the manner in which contemporary models of spoken word recognition and production can map onto neural models of the recognition and production processes The issue of exactly what is recognised and when is dealt with next the empirical findings suggest that the function of something to which a word refers is accessed with a different time course to the form of that something This has considerable implications for the nature and content of lexical representations Equally important are the findings from the studies of disordered lexical processing and two papers in this volume address the implications of these disorders for models of lexical representation and process borrowing from both empirical data and computational modelling The final paper explores whether neural networks can successfully model certain lexical phenomena that have elsewhere been assumed to require rule based processes Rhetoric, Innovation, Technology Stephen Doheny-Farina,1992 Stephen Doheny Farina shows that the technical and commercial processes of turning technologies into products are in significant ways communication processes Improving the way that technology is transferred from laboratory to marketplace is central to improving American productivity and competitiveness in a global economy In this provocative analysis Stephen Doheny Farina shows that the technical and commercial processes of turning technologies into products are in significant ways communication processes He explores the key role that technical communicators must play in the movement of technology from expert designers and developers to users Several lengthy case studies illustrate the rhetorical issues involved in technology transfers as well as the rhetorical barriers to their success Doheny Farina argues that processes typically called information transfer and technology transfer are not transfers at all but instead are series of personal constructions and reconstructions of knowledge expertise and technologies by the participants attempting to adapt technological innovations for social uses Underscoring the rhetorical nature of any technology transfer the case studies describe the powerful effect that a startup company s business plan can have on its future including the many factors that surround the writing of a business plan the rhetorical barriers to the transfer of an experimental artificial heart from a university research hospital to a biomedical products manufacturer and two compelling situations that call for the inclusion of technical writers in new product development from its inception A final chapter focuses on the important elements in the education of technical communicators and an appendix discusses classroom applications and includes a fictional case incorporating issues of intraorganizational barriers to collaboration in the new product development process
