It is argued that the use of guidelines of evidence-based management approaches such as MBAS and the associated underlying business objectives is important to the success of the implementation of the MBAS. However, the MBAS is not a one-size-fits-all solution. The MBAS is a management tool that is designed to be used in a way that is appropriate to the needs of the organization. Abstract

These authors' findings suggest that teachers spend the considerable majority of their working time on tasks that are unrelated to their students' learning. Although the authors do not provide any evidence for their claim, the authors state that the data suggest that the majority of the time is spent on tasks that are unrelated to their students' learning.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were 20 men, aged 40-50 years, who were sedentary and had no known health problems. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. The physical fitness and health of the subjects were measured at the beginning and end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and health than the control group at the end of the 12-week period. The exercise group had significantly higher levels of cardiovascular fitness, muscular strength, and endurance. They also had significantly lower levels of body fat and blood pressure. The control group had no significant changes in physical fitness or health. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness and health of sedentary, middle-aged men.
