

Executive summary

This Safety Report, the first ever comprehensive publication of its kind to be issued by a company, shows details on Uber's safety progress, processes, and data related to reports of the most serious safety incidents on our platform. It represents the latest in a series of actions Uber has taken to continually improve the safety of our platform for all who use it.

We know most companies would not share publicly much of the information we have included here. But even though the amount of data we've shared is relatively small, we believe that releasing this report demonstrates our belief that the best way to improve safety is to be transparent about it. We believe that transparency is the best way to improve safety, particularly by those reporting the most serious incidents. And, simply put, we don't believe corporate secrecy will make anyone safer.

People have a right to know about the safety results of the companies and organizations they rely on every day. And we believe that publishing this data will help us drive forward progress that will prevent serious safety incidents from occurring in the first place.

The issues in this report are bigger than Uber and impact every corner of society, as a whole. The data itself may challenge assumptions. For example, while media coverage of one issue of sexual assault related to Uber has shown entirely portrayed drivers as the alleged offenders, our data shows that drivers report assaults at nearly the same rate as others across the 5 most serious categories of sexual assault. Drivers have victims, too.

This report includes information about Uber's safety investments and the actions we take as a result of safety-related reports from users. But the primary focus is the other data about reports of serious safety incidents—and to derive insights that help us think our progress, for more accountability, and to bring them safely on our platform and across the industry.

It is important to understand the scale of Uber's business in interpreting this data. This year, nearly one billion trips happened every day in the US—more than 45 million every weekend. And with a larger scale, Uber's platform ultimately reflects the world in which we operate—both the good and the bad. So the numbers in this report will show critical safety incidents across platform users, of all kinds, nationwide. But even more critical safety incidents in our company happen every 11 seconds in the United States and in other countries.

For the purposes of this report, we examine data from 2017 and 2018—a time frame in which an average of more than 3.2 million trips happened every day in the US. The vast majority (98.9%) of all Uber trips end without any safety-related issue at all. For example, for the trips in 2017 and 2018:

- 1.8% of trips had a supplier's request of a report of a sexual safety incident, but frequently the issue was not sexual abuse, assault, or sexual harassment.
- 0.2% of trips had a supplier's request for a safety-related concern, and the majority of those concerns were a low level less-serious safety issue such as a complaint of feeling unsafe or a verbal argument.
- 0.0003% of trips had a report of a critical safety incident,¹ which are the incidents referenced in this report.

The vast majority of the report's data shows incidents are not safety-related at all. All potential safety-related reports are not necessarily considered by Uber as safety-related for proper adjudication. When our supplier's data measures safety-related reports, they are flagged and classified by algorithms based on the description given by the reporting party, and appropriate action is then taken on a case-by-case basis.

We don't believe corporate secrecy will make anyone safer.
