

FIFTH-GRADE READING COMPREHENSION PASSAGES

You Don't Know Tony

People stare at my older brother whenever he goes, although everybody must be able to understand that people with special needs are the rescue. In short, he's sweet, smart, compassionate, and talented. And you know he must be really awesome because it's his younger brother, and this is going about

Cesar Chavez

Chavez was born in 1927 to a Mexican American family. They ran a small farm near the California-Mexico border. In 1955, they lost their farm after being tricked by some dishonest men and became migrant farm workers in California. During harvest season, they lived in their car or under a tree with just a blanket for working every week in the farm

fields.

The Abandoned House

"Anyone who goes in that house is destined to be attacked by zombies. Or is living, or something, in there?" Kaylee asks. "No, anyone who goes in that house deserves to become a legend at Harper School," Marissa countered.

Everyone at their lunch table knew those they were talking about without it being said. Not recognized on the way home, they were talking about without it being said. Not recognized on the way home, they were talking about without it being said. Not recognized on the way home, they were talking about without it being said.

Bony Fish vs. Cartilaginous Fish efficient - achieving a desired result without wasting energy support - to hold up diverse - the forces that causes a moving object to slow down as a result of contact with another object diverse - made up of many things or groups that are different from each other

Touch the tip of your nose and gently push on it. It moves, right? That's because your nose gets its shape from a material called cartilage rather than from bone. Cartilage also gives shape to your ears and whiskers, and it cushions many joints, including your elbows, knees, and ankles as well as those in your spine. Both firm and supportive, cartilage is softer and more flexible than bone.

Now that you know what cartilage is, imagine if your entire skeleton were made of it. Your arms and legs would bend instead of providing strong support. Your skull wouldn't be able to protect your brain nearly as well. You'd have to learn completely new ways to move and do things.

The idea of a cartilaginous skeleton isn't all that new. It's really for a group of fish. Sharks, rays, skates, spinyfish, and ghost sharks are all cartilaginous fish. They account for less than 1 percent of all fish and about 1,100 living species. In contrast, there are at least 28,000 living species of fish. Almost all cartilaginous fish live in oceans, which contain salt water. Bony fish are found in both fresh and salt water.

Two kinds of fish differ in several important ways. One kind skeleton differs from the other with skeletons. Cartilage is strong, but it's not as firm as bone. Having a lighter skeleton allows sharks and their relatives to swim faster and use less energy. Coming from the same efficient all cartilaginous fish and bony fish, and they have less food. Another reason some faster is because their skeleton is flexible, so they can bend and turn quickly.

A bony fish, an example of a bony fish.

A great white shark, an example of a cartilaginous fish.
