Color Psychology Paper

Research Question:

How does color affect one's mood?

Review of Literature:

Colors may just seem simple and unimportant, but they affect our daily lives more than we may know. If someone is feeling angry, it could just be because they're angry, or it could be perhaps that they are surrounded by or looking at the color red. That's right! People's moods can change just because they are looking at different colors! There are many theories on how just a simple color can change one's whole mood.

According to Johnson (2007), color does affect mood by producing certain chemicals and stimulating different feelings such as hunger. For example, blue can make one feel calm because it releases calming chemicals, and red can make one hungry because it is an appetite stimulant. Yellow can make one feel irritated, and it is a fact that people lose their temper most in yellow rooms. However, pink is tranquilizing and can make one feel weak. In conclusion, Johnson says that depending on the color, one's body can do things (like producing chemicals) that cause a certain emotional reaction (mad, sad, etc.).

Another idea, by Smith (2007), is that the effect color produces is based on what one's body does in response. For example, yellow is mentally stimulating, and activates memory, whereas red increases confidence. Also, brown can make a person feel orderly and stable, while a dark blue can make one feel sad. Therefore, Smith says that different colors do in fact change one's mood and the consequences can be negative or positive.

A third writer, Wollard, (2000) seems to think that color can affect one's mood, but the effect also can depend on one's culture and what one's personal reflection may be. For example, someone from Japan may not associate red with anger, as people from the U.S. tend to do. Also, a person who likes the color brown may associate brown with happiness. However, Wollard does think that colors can make everyone feel the same, or close to the same, mood. According to Wollard, pink reduces aggression, which is why the walls of the jail cells in the Seattle prison are pink! Also, brown can make one feel comforted. Wollard feels that colors do affect one's mood, but there are other factors that can alter what one is supposed to feel.

Eric, John, and Paraag's (2007) main point about color psychology is that color has both a physiological and psychological effect. For example, green makes people feel relaxed because it relaxes their muscles and makes them breathe deeper and more slowly. Furthermore, blue lowers blood pressure, which makes one feel calm. Eric, John, and Paraag conclude that color affects one's mood because of what it does to the body.

attention paid to its implications for the domain of educational inclusion specifically However tensions between differing conceptualisations of difference and the role of categorisation present questions as yet not fully answered as to the ways in which evidence can and should articulate with practice in this specific domain For example issues of what is inclusion the place of norms and values that define inclusion how we conceptualize and think about difference across culture language and cognition are raised when we think about the application of evidence to practice in the area of educational inclusion

Parents with Mental and/or Substance Use Disorders and their Children, volume III Anja Wittkowski, Joanne Nicholson, Jean Lillian Paul, Geneviève Piché, 2025-07-30 Families living with parental mental and or substance use disorders continue to face considerable biopsychosocial challenges with complex pathways to mitigating risk enhancing resilience and supporting recovery An ecological life span approach to improving outcomes for all family members infants children adolescents and adults who are parents requires careful consideration of sociocultural conditions life stages and developmental ages alongside family focused needs goals and plans In addition community contexts policy developments and practice innovation play roles in contributing to the wellbeing and functioning of all family members The risk conveyed to all family members by parental mental and or substance use disorders is great Fortunately the opportunities to intervene are plentiful and varied However in many cases interventions are unspecified untested and not brought to scale in regional state or national initiatives We may have the requisite knowledge to inform policy and practice but this evidence may not be applied to effect innovation or change suggesting the need for widespread knowledge translation and dissemination efforts with significant potential to improve public mental health

How Children Learn from Parents and Parenting Others in Formal and Informal Settings: International and Cultural

Perspectives, 2nd Edition Yvette Renee Harris, Claudio Longobardi, 2020-07-28 For several decades parent child cognitive interaction researchers have acknowledged that children learn cognitive skills in the context of their social and early environments These cognitive skills are often imparted to the children by parents or parenting others in formal or informal settings Thus for example such informal settings as dinner table conversations walks through grocery stores museums or neighborhoods become rich laboratories for children to learn varied cognitive skills ranging from numeracy concepts and language The way in which those learning opportunities are provided by parents structured by parents and scaffolded by parents may well vary depending on culture and other socio demographic variables and may well vary depending on formal or informal settings The aim of this Research Topic is to bring together scholarship from both global north and global south contexts which explores how children learn via parental involvement in formal and informal settings Publisher's note In this 2nd edition the following article has been added Harris YR and Longobardi C 2020 Editorial How Children Learn From Parents and Parenting Others in Formal and Informal Settings International and Cultural Perspectives Front Psychol 11 1026 doi 10.3389/fpsyg.2020.01026 Handbook of Family Measurement Techniques: Abstracts John Touliatos, Barry F.
