Fuel System

The diesel fuel system consists of a fuel tank, mechanical lift pump, fuel filter/sediment separator, DPS fuel injection pump, fuel injectors and interconnecting fuel lines. A dry type air cleaner removes dirt and contaminants from the air intake.

The fuel is drawn from the fuel tank by a mechanical lift pump which pumps fuel into the sediment separator. The fuel is then drawn from the sediment separator to the fuel injection pump inlet via the fuel filter by means of the vacuum created by the transfer pump which forms an integral part of the fuel injection pump.

The transfer pump delivers fuel to the injection pump to supply fuel at high pressure to each injector and also provides extra fuel which lubricates and cools the injection pump. This extra fuel is recirculated via a fitting on the fuel injection pump governor control housing to the fuel tank by means of the injector leak-off line.

On all models the excess fuel that leaks past the needle valve of the injectors is directed back into the fuel tank at the filler neck by means of the injection leak-off line.
