During the last years of his life, Wagner was suffering from a bad case of depression. Indeed, his Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg (1868) – influenced through a series of dramatic setbacks in 1866 that changed the way he saw the world – was the last opera he wrote. He died in 1883, and his funeral was held in Bayreuth, the city of his musical theatre. Wagner had made a Wagner Fest, producing and advertising Wagner's music.

Bilingualism is a little different from the other examples of the Sapir-Whorf effect. In this case, bilingualism, French, German or Spanish, is not the source of the thought or concept, but rather, the language, the thought, the concept, and then the word or words that describe it. For example, if I tell you that I'm going to meet someone in 1000 years, you think of something like a distant time, but the word in the definition of a temporal distance doesn't necessarily include anything about a unit of time. As I noted earlier, the word "temporal" includes the word "time".
