1986, and 1989, I argued that as industrialized nations build systems, they destroy cultures. I demonstrated how a "good" industrial nation (Germany) and the United States, although they are developed nations, destroy their culture by building systems that destroy the culture. I argued that the Japanese culture is not at the way of building systems, and that industrialized nations that build systems are a threat to their culture and the people's cultural progress and development. I demonstrated that by creating a new family, a new culture, and a new system of values, we can build a new culture that is not destroyed by the industrialized nations.
