The Influence of Attitudes, Beliefs, and Social Factors on Caregivers' Decisions on the Use of OTC Medications in Preschool Children Connie R. Ecklund,1998 The purpose of this descriptive correlational study was to determine the extent that social factors health beliefs and attitudes influenced caregiver's decisions in home management with over the counter OTC medications Home management decisions were studied in relation to seeking professional care The association of parents decisions concerning OTC medications with social factors as well as beliefs and attitudes related to illness susceptibility and severity and medication effectiveness was examined A theoretical framework based on the Health Belief Model Rosenstock 1974 guided the conceptualization of this study A convenience sample of caregivers with an index child of 3 5 years of age was recruited through county based Head Start programs Approximately 50 caregivers completed the study instrument at monthly parent counsel meetings Data were analyzed using Pearson product moment correlational coefficient Significant correlations were noted between the age of the caregiver perception of severity of the child's illness and perception of the child's susceptibility to illness and calling the doctor for advice or intervention. There were also significant correlations between both the economic status of the household and the perceived effect of OTC medications with caregiver's report of when they would give OTC medications. No significant relationships were found between trust in doctors, barriers to seeking care, and gender of the child, and either the choice of giving OTC medication or calling the doctor. It has been estimated that more than 50% of all 3-year-olds have been given some type of OTC medication (Kogan et al 1994).
