Human Capital Creation in an Economic Perspective Rita Asplund, 2013-11-22 The past few decades have seen a revolutionary increase in interest in the economic role of education and training at the societal business and individual levels This is mainly due to the strong post war growth in industrialized economies which has been driven by rapid technological progress and far reaching structural change and in the end has resulted in increasingly skill intensive production and growing demand for more educated labour Today it is frequently argued that with the increasing importance of the role of

know how the workforce has become the most important single input in the production process Simultaneously the dramatic increase in the availability of large micro level databases has opened enormous possibilities to study the economic role of human capital creation also empirically The economic perspective of human capital accumulation is however of utmost importance also in times of deep economic recession Periods of economic slowdown and rapidly increasing unemployment tend to increase the demand for advanced education and training in particular This brings up in turn questions regarding overeducation and satisfying both private and social returns on investments in human capital
