Tribes, Land, and the Environment Sarah Krakoff, 2016-02-17 Legal and environmental concerns related to Indian law and tribal lands remain an understudied branch of both indigenous law and environmental law Native American tribes have a far more complex relationship with the environment than is captured by the stereotype of Indians as environmental stewards Meaningful tribal sovereignty requires that non Indians recognize the right of Indians to determine their own relationship to the land and the environment But tribes do not exist in a vacuum in fact they are deeply affected by off reservation activities and similarly tribal choices often have effects on nearby communities This book brings together diverse essays by leading Indian law scholars across the disciplines of indigenous and environmental law The chapters reveal the difficulties encountered by Native American tribes in attempts to establish their own environmental standards within federal Indian law and environmental law structures Gleaning new insights from a focus on tribal land and property law the collection studies the practice of tribal sovereignty as experienced by Indians and non Indians with an emphasis on the development and regulatory challenges these tribes face in the wake of climate change This volume will advance the reader's knowledge and understanding of these challenging issues The Oxford Handbook of Historical Ecology and Applied Archaeology Christian Isendahl, Daryl Stump, 2019-01-10 The Oxford Handbook of Historical Ecology and Applied Archaeology presents theoretical discussions methodological outlines and case studies describing the field of overlap between historical ecology and the emerging sub discipline of applied archaeology to highlight how modern environments and landscapes have been shaped by humans Historical ecology is based on the recognition that humans are not only capable of modifying their environments but that all environments on earth have already been directly or indirectly modified This includes anthropogenic climate change widespread deforestations and species extinctions but also very local alterations the effects of which may last a few years or may have legacies lasting centuries or more With contributions from anthropologists archaeologists human geographers and historians this volume focuses not just on defining human impacts in the past but on the ways that understanding these changes can help inform contemporary practices and development policies Some chapters present examples of how ancient or current societies have modified their environments in sustainable ways while others highlight practices that had unintended long term consequences The possibilities of learning from these practices are discussed as is the potential of using the long history of human resource exploitation as a method for building or testing models of future change The volume offers overviews for students researchers and professionals with an interest in conservation or development projects who want to understand what practical insights can be drawn from history and who seek to apply their work to contemporary issues Human Ecodynamics in the North Atlantic Ramona Harrison, Ruth A. Maher, 2014-10-08 In Human Ecodynamics in the North Atlantic A Collaborative Model of Humans and Nature through Space and Time Ramona Harrison and Ruth A

Maher have compiled a series of separate research projects conducted across the North Atlantic region that each contribute greatly to anthropological archaeology. This book assembles a regional model through which the reader is presented with a vivid and detailed image of the climatic events and cultures which have occupied these seas and lands for roughly a 5000 year period. It provides a model of adaptability, resilience and sustainability that can be applied globally. First visiting the Northern Isles of Scotland in the Orkney Islands, the reader is taken through the archaeology from the Neolithic Period through World War II in the face of sea level rise and rapidly eroding coastlines. The Shetland Islands then reveal a deep time study of one large scale Iron Age excavation. On to the northern coasts of Norway where information about late medieval maritime peoples is explained. Iceland explores human environment interaction and implications of climate change presented from the Viking Age through the Early Modern Era. Rounding out the North Atlantic Region is Greenland which sheds light on the Norse in the late Viking Age and the Middle Ages.

Fishes in Lagoons and Estuaries in the Mediterranean 1 Mohamed Hichem Kara, Jean-Pierre Quignard, 2018-11-26. Lagoons and estuaries are transition spaces between earth and sea. Beyond their expanse, geographic repartition, geomorphological, hydroclimatic and ecobiological diversity and biodiversity, they play an important role in regional economies and are some of the ecosystems most vulnerable to global change.
