Multiple sclerosis (MS) is a chronic autoimmune disease of the central nervous system (CNS) that causes inflammation and damage to the myelin sheath that covers the brain and spinal cord. The disease is characterized by a relapsing and remitting course, with periods of active disease (relapses) followed by periods of relative stability (remissions). The exact cause of MS is unknown, but it is thought to be an autoimmune disease in which the immune system attacks the myelin sheath. MS can cause a wide range of symptoms, including vision problems, muscle weakness, numbness, and cognitive impairment. There is no cure for MS, but treatment can help to manage symptoms and slow the progression of the disease. MS is a complex disease with many different subtypes, and the course of the disease can vary significantly between individuals. The National Multiple Sclerosis Society (NMSS) is a leading organization that provides information and support for people with MS and their families.
