

Political Science 1001 – American National Government

Study Guide for Exam 1C

What makes a good democracy "participatory"? Approximately what percentage of Americans participate in some political activities? How does this compare with other nations?

Answer: Americans have lower participation rates than most other nations, particularly those with higher income levels.

What are some reasons? How consistently do Americans demonstrate political participation? Political science finds "voluntary"? Difficult to measure for this?

Answer: Some scholars argue that there are largely consistent rates of political participation across different groups.

What are the major differences, and why? How do they relate to the ability to actively measure political participation?

Answer: There are differences in the way that different groups are measured, and the way that different groups are measured. For example, some studies use self-reported participation, while others use more objective measures.
