Population And Communities Chapter Test:

Modeling Populations of Adaptive Individuals Steven F. Railsback, Bret C. Harvey, 2020-05-19 This book offers a new theory for modeling how organisms make tradeoff decisions and how these decisions affect both individuals and populations Tradeoff decisions or behaviors are those that are optimize survival and include behaviors like foraging and reproduction Existing theories have not painted a complete picture of tradeoff decisions because they only observe how the decisions of an individual affect them rather than how individuals impact and are impacted by the behavior of their communities The authors theory which they call state and prediction based theory uses individual based models since these models show the complex ways that organisms relate to their environment The authors broader approach one that integrates behavior and population dynamics allows ecologists to see how individuals make adaptive tradeoff decisions In simpler terms this theory does not assume as the previous models do that future conditions are fixed known and unaffected by the behavior of others Instead the authors assume individuals make decisions like people do which is by forecasting future conditions using approximation to make good decisions and updating their choices as conditions change

The Population Ecology of Interest Representation Virginia Gray, David Lowery, 1996 This examination of lobbying communities explores how interest group populations are constructed and how they influence politics and public policy By examining how populations of interest groups are comprised this work fills an important gap between existing theories of the origins of individual interest groups and studies of interest group influence The population ecology model of interest communities developed here builds on insights first developed in population biology and later employed by organizational ecologists The model s central premise is that it is the environmental forces confronting interest organizations that most directly shape the contours of interest populations After examining the demography of interest organizations in the fifty American states the population ecology model is used to account for variations in the density and diversity of their interest communities the nature of competition among similar interest organizations to establish viable niches and the impact of alternative configurations of interest communities on the legislative process and the policies it produces These empirical findings suggest that the environment of interest communities is highly constraining limiting their size composition and potential impact on politics Virginia Gray is Professor of Political Science University of Minnesota David Lowery is Burton Craige Professor of Political Science University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
