Figures 1 and 2 show the observed and predicted values of the probability of a firm's survival, based on the actual number of patents and the number of employees, respectively. The observed values are plotted against the predicted values, and the diagonal line represents the line of perfect agreement. The observed values are generally higher than the predicted values, indicating that the model tends to predict a lower probability of survival than what is actually observed.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. A government producer (as in a public utility) that is required to supply a certain amount of output will not be able to adjust its output level if its price is too low or too high. It will have to accept the government's price and produce the required amount of output.
